CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS PLLC

February 26, 2018

To the Board of Directors
Operation Oswego County, Inc.
Oswego, New York

In planning and performing our audit of the basic financial statements of Operation Oswego County, Inc. as of and for the year ended December 31, 2017, in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America and the standards applicable to financial audits contained in Government Auditing Standards, issued by the Comptroller General of the United States, we considered Operation Oswego County, Inc.'s internal control over financial reporting (internal control) as a basis for designing audit procedures that are appropriate in the circumstances for the purpose of expressing our opinions on the financial statements, but not for the purpose of expressing an opinion on the effectiveness of the entity's internal control. Accordingly, we do not express an opinion on the effectiveness of Operation Oswego County, Inc.'s internal control over financial reporting.

Our consideration of internal control was for the limited purpose described in the preceding paragraph and was not designed to identify all deficiencies in internal control that might be significant deficiencies or material weaknesses and therefore, significant deficiencies or material weaknesses may exist that have not been identified.

A deficiency in internal control exists when the design or operation of a control does not allow management or employees, in the normal course of performing their assigned functions, to prevent, or detect and correct misstatements on a timely basis. A material weakness is a deficiency or a combination of deficiencies in internal control, such that there is a reasonable possibility that a material misstatement of the entity's financial statements will not be prevented, or detected and corrected on a timely basis.

A significant deficiency is a deficiency, or a combination of deficiencies, in internal control that is less severe than a material weakness, yet important enough to merit attention by those charged with governance. We consider the deficiencies identified in Schedule A to be significant deficiencies. None of the identified significant deficiencies are considered to be material weaknesses.

The purpose of this communication, which is an integral part of our audit, is to describe for management and those charged with governance the scope of our testing of internal control and the results of that testing. Accordingly, this communication is not intended to be and should not be used for any other purpose.

Very truly yours,

Schedule A Control Deficiencies

Segregation of Duties

Due to the size of the Organization, there are a limited number of staff available to establish an optimal internal control system with proper segregations of duties. In the cash disbursement cycle we noted that one staff has access to print checks, enter data into the QuickBooks general ledger and perform bank reconciliations. Assigning the preparation of bank reconciliations to an independent individual would enhance internal controls. We recommend that another employee or a financially experienced member of the Board perform the bank reconciliations. It is also recommended that another management employee or committee member of the board formally review the bank reconciliations on a monthly basis.

Within the cash receipt process, we noted that receipts are opened at the front desk and a log is made of the daily cash receipt activity. The staff who prepares the bank deposit then generates a second log. We recommend that an independent person compare the logs with each other daily and resolve any identified differences.

Preparation of Financial Statements

There is not an individual on staff with the skills, knowledge and experience to prepare financial statements and the required footnotes in accordance with Generally Accepted Accounting Principles (GAAP), as applied to governmental units.

Non-Compliance of Reporting Requirements

The Organization is subject to the reporting requirements contained in the New York State Public Authorities Law and is required to file the required Public Authorities Reporting Information System (PARIS) reporting within 90 days of year-end. It is noted that the prior year PARIS reporting was not filed within the required timeframe. We recommend that Management and the Board diligently work to meet required deadlines to remain in compliance with such requirements.
